At the White House, President Reagan holds the tally sheet for his 52-to-48 victory on the AWACS package in the Senate.

Reagan Says He Made No Deals for AWACS

By Howell Raines New York Thmes Service WASHINGTON - President Reagan said Wednesday be made no political deals to achieve Senate approval of the sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia, which he said would enhance world confidence in the United States as a military ally.

OPEC Has Unity on

$34 Base Price Frozen to '83

From Agency Dispatcher GENEVA — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed Thursday on a new unified oil price with a $2 increase to $34 a barrel in the benchmark price for Sandi Arabian light oil. An OPEC communiqué, issued at the end of a one-day meeting of the organization's 13 members, said the benchmark price for Saudi oil, effective no later than Nov. 1, will remain frozen until the end of 1982

The communiqué said the conference also agreed to set differen-tials for the pricing of the quality and location of OPEC crudes. It did not give details of the agreed differentials that can be added to the benchmark price. But Kuwaiti Oil Minister Sheikh Ali Khalifa al-Sabah said that countries with the best oil and closest to major markets would be permitted to charge premiums of up to $4 a barrel.

Informed OPEC conference sources said Saudi Arabia's $2 a barrel price rise is backdated to Oct. 1.

Sheikh al-Sabah told a news conference that Saudi medium crude would be priced at a dis-count of $1 a barrel from the $34 marker and heavy crude at a discount of $2.50.

The compromise, ending 2½ years of internal OPEC disarray. came in the third ministerial emergency session within five months to seek pricing reunification.

Apparently slowed by a cold, Mr. Reagan invited two hold-outs, Democratic Senators David Pryor of Arkansas and Edward Zorinsky of Nebraska, to visit him in the red-carpeted private study of the White House family quarters at midday.

At about 4:30 p.m., Mr. Reagan went to the Oval Office to await results of the roll-call vote, which began at about 5 p.m. In a nearby, White House office, his chief of staff, James A. France Excludes Art Works From Wealth Tax

Mitterrand Overrules Cabinet After Dealers Warn of Cultural Flight

PARIS - The president of France intervened Thursday to exempt works of art from the Socialisi government's wealth tax after dealers and collectors warned that ية. 6the original tax plan could cause the biggest cultural flight since the French Revolution.

> By overruling his Cabinet ministers, Francois Mitterrand apparently bas preserved the fine arts' traditional role as many Frenchmen's favorite way of putting away their money beyond the tax collector's reach.

The concession by Mr. Mitter-rand — a man who is sensitive to France's culture heritage - was balanced by a plan for higher charges on art sales to compensate for lost tax revenues.

A Moribund Market

The charges, two dealers said, are another setback in the moribund Paris art market, which com-petes with cheaper commissions in London and New York. "But at London and New York. least it's a tax on business, not on the pleasures of ownership," Mau-rice Rheims, doyen of French auctioneers, said.

Resentment against the original plan - which included art works in the wealth tax - has been laced with bitterness against its anthor, 34-year-old Budget Minister Laurent Fabius, who knows the an-tique business well. He was brought up in it by his father and uncle before studying in France's élite schools and adopting e leftward political career.

The new law will require residents of France - including for-Culture Minister Jack Lang that eigners - to pay an annual tax be-tween 0.5 and 1.5 percent on wealth totaling more than $600,000. With works of art excluded, it will cover property and stocks, but probably not forests. (Mr. Mitterrand is said to like woodland.) The new measure is expected to affect about 150,000 families --- less than 1 percent of the population.

AWACS Victory Likely to Boost Reagan Credibility Abroad

By Hedrick Smith

New York Times Service WASHINGTON — President Reagan's startling victory in the Senate on the arms package for Saudi Arabia will bolster his credibility and influence with the moderate Arab countries and with European governments although it sharpens his differences at least temporarily with Israel.

To have come from so far behind on a crucial foreign policy issue has also given the president a badly needed lift in the domestic political arena after a period of discouraging economic and political developments. "We were in the fall doldrums," acknowledged Sen Paul Laxalt, Republican of Nevada, a close friend of the president. "We needed a big one like this.'

Although most Democrats and some Republicans have seen the Saudi arms package as a special issue with little link to the inconclusive maneuvering on budget cuts, Sen. Laxalt and White House strategists contended that Wednesday's victory will strengthen the president's hand with Congress on the budget and defense

10 Target Senators

"Now we can zero in on the economic issue," the senator asserted. "This demonstrates that the presi-dent is still very, very effective on Capitol Hill at a time when people were questioning whether his mo-mentum had been arrested. can prevail on a major foreign policy issue against powerful, organized opposition and one of Washing-ton's most potent lobbies, the pro-Israel lobby. As several Western ambassadors here have remarked privately, the question of Mr. Reagan's control of foreign policy has been on the minds of European governments as well as the Saudis and other moderate Arabs. Wednesday, they drew encouragement from the vote.

The president made the point that the Senate, by backing him up, had made this country a more reli-able ally to overseas partners. As to the Middle East, he asserted that the Senate action will "not only strengthen Saudi-U.S. relations, but will also protect our economic lifeline to the Middle East, win favor among moderate Arab nations and, most important, continue the difficult but steady progress toward peace and stability in the Middle East

Ten days ago, you could have had 10-to-1 odds against this bappening. We had only 40 votes then. We had 10 target senators and we got every one of them." Despite the close 52-48 vote margin, Mr. Reagan's first foreign policy triumph in Congress enabled him to demonstrate both to domestic opponents and for-eign nowers that if he feels personally committed he Administration officials said that the Israelis had presidential defeats on foreign policy showed how raised this point privately just 24 hours before the AWACS vote, but that their suggestion had been re-jected. It was more likely, officials said, that the Reagan administration would move now to flesh out the concept of a strategic partnership with Israel dis-cussed during Mr. Begin's visit here last month-

Influential Jewish Republicans, who privately voiced grievance over their sense of alienation from the administration on the AWACS issue and the fear that the president had suffered political damage among Jewish voters, say that they will now watch to see whether the White House moves to patch up those differences or chooses to "gloat over heating the Jew-ish lobby." as a Jewish leader put it.

Test of Leadership

By putting his personal prestige so clearly on the line and emphasizing the need for U.S. credibility on foreign policy, especially in a volatile region like the Middle East, Mr. Reagan deliberately set up the AWACS vote as a test of his leadership.

"Defeat would have been severely damaging to our efforts to further the peace process and the presi-dent's effort to be an honest broker in the Middle East," commented Sen. John G. Tower, Republican of Texas, who voted with the administration.

In part, Mr. Reagan fell heir to the tradition of giving presidents their way on foreign policy. Former President Jimmy Carter used much the same issue his need to control foreign policy and maintain com-mitments — to win Senate approval in May, 1978, for an earlier arms package for Saudi Arabia and in April, 1978, for the Panama Canal Treaties, then opposed by Mr. Reagan. But the closeness of Wednesday's vote and other tenuous that argument can be with the increasingly assertive mood of Congress. In 1975, former Presi-dent Gerald R. Ford was rebuffed when Congress refused to lift the ban on arms sales to Turkey and later cut off funds for covert military aid to Angola. And Mr. Carter last year had to withdraw the arms treaty with Moscow when it faced near-certain defeat to the Senate

Added Credibility

For Mr. Reagan, one immediate foreign policy ad-vantage will be the added credibility he gams among moderate Arabs for having opposed Israel on an arms issue and having prevailed.

The administration is certain to use the whole epi-sode to push its plans for increased cooperation against Soviet and radical penetration in the Gulf and around the Arabian peninsula, and to try to draw other moderate Arabs into the Middle East peace diplomacy. This weekend, King Hussein of Jordan arrives for talks, with both sides reported eager to repair their damaged diplomatic ties. "The AWACS vote will belp," an official said.

But even as they sensed defeat, foes of the deal warned that over the long run the United States would come to regret selling the Saudis such sophisti-cated equipment. Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon, the Republican co-leader of the opposition, warned that Washington would eventually face hostile powers on the Arabian peninsula because the Saudi monarchy would be overthrown either by "rightwing religious fanatics or leftwing radicals."

"We're putting all of our eggs in one basket — the Saudi basket," Sen. Packwood warned, "and it's the wrong basket."

councilman last May and a bomb and grenade attack on a Vienna city googue that left two dead and 20 injured last August. Police said Bahij Younis, 28, who had been posing as a student in Salzburg, provided weapons for Mohammed Rajid, an Iraqi, for his alleged murder of Councilman Heinz Nittel on May 1. Hard-liner Endorsed as Iran Premier - Fran Agency Dispatchesi

ANKARA - Iran's parliament Thursday endorsed Foreign Minister Mir Hossein Musavi, a hard-line Islamic fundamentalist, as Iran's new-est premier, the official Pars news agency reported from Tehran.

Mr. Mnsavi won approval from 115 of 202 Majlis members voting, with 39 others opposed to his confirmation and 48 abstaining. He re-places Ayatollah Mohammed Reza Mahdavi Kani, who resigned on October 15.

Mr. Musavi, 39, the editor and publisher of the ruling Islamic Republican Party's Islamic Republic newspaper, was President Ali Khamene's second choice for the premiership. One week ago, the Majlis voted 80 to 74 against endorsing Dr. Ali-Akbar Velayati, a pediatrician educated in the United States.

From Agency Dispatcher YAOUNDE, Cameroon - Chadian troops backed by Libyan armor have staged a show of force in the Chadian capital of N'Djamena in an effort to dissuade President Goukonni Oueddei from reneging on his pledge to mite Chad with Libya, according to reports reach-ing Konsseri, Cameroon, across the Chan River from N'Djamena.

The Associated Press PIETERMARITZBURG, South Africa - A white paratrooper Wednesday was acquitted of murdering 14 blacks, but found guilty of lesser charges stemming from his involvement in faction fighting between Zuln tribesmen.

French President Francois Mitterrand last week urged the Organ-ization of African Unity to carry out promptly a July decision to send a joint force to Chad. This would replace the Libyan troops, which have been there since they intervened to help end a civil war last year.

France, which withdrew its own forces from Chad in May, 1980, this week began sending supplies and light weapons to Mr. Goukouni's forces.

Col. Qadhafi's second in command, Maj. Abdel-Salam Jalloud, Thursday denounced France's ap-peal to the OAU as interference in Chad's internal all'airs, the Algeri-an news agency reported. Maj. Jal-loud, who is in N'Djamena, was speaking on Chad radio, the agency said.

The U.S. State Department said Tuesday that the Reagan adminis-tration may align itself with France in backing the Goukouni government and in urging that Li-byan forces in Chad, estimated at 10,000 men, be sent home. In December, Libyan troops intervened on behalf of Mr. Goukoumi, upping the balance in his favor and ending a nine-month-old civil war.

Mr. Schmidt, who said the economy's most urgent need was for a cut in interest rates, received a long ovation Wednesday on his first public engagement since an operation to fit a heart pacemaker earlier this month. Mr. Schmidt said West Germany would stand a little better than most countries next year. He said efforts to end the policy of high interest rates was the most urgent priority for the West German economy, and that a drop of only 2 percentage points would help more than any job-creation program. Meanwhile, Economics Minister Otto Lambsdorff predicted Thursday that the West German economy would remain stagnant through 1981 and that the country's gross national product would be weaker next year than had been thought er Thorbjorn Falldin Thursday annonnced a tax reform package that he said would ease the tax burden on 3.5 million of the country's six million taxpayers, reduce the highest tax bracket from 85 to 50 percent of a taxpayer's income and cost the gov-ernment about 10 billion kronor (1.8 billion dollars).

Reduced tax allowances will finance 1.4 billion kronor of the revenue shortfall, and increased payroll taxes or a new industry tax could make up the rest, Mr. Falldin said at a news conference. · · · · ·

The reform, which Mr. Falidin said would take three years to put into effect beginning in 1983 if approved by Swedish parliament, was decided because of a growing realization that the Swedish economy was being harmed by a lack of incentive to earn more because of steep taxes, economic analysts said.

The main fear of the art world, however, focused on the provision — now apparently eliminated that counts art as wealth. "The cffect would be to create a parallel black market like the one in Italy. said Mr. Rheims. He added, "Op-jects change hands privately, and then escape the country like sheep leaping fences in a nightmare."

The wealth tax itself is less contested than some provisions that would lead to embarrassing questions about income. For example, art purchases above $1,000 henceforth will have to be paid for, not in cash, but by traceable check. This law goes to the heart of the time-honored French practice of using art deals to launder undeclared income. In France, a person selling a painting pays a tax of 3 deeper: "It could kill art in France because artists can only work in places where collectors can collect, Le. in places like New York where the tax structure encourages collec-tors instead of punishing them."

Rumors abound that the new wealth tax will empower tax collectors to search French homes. A Paris woman explained it bluntly: To discuss a tax audit in France. she said, "You go to the tax man's office, he doesn't come to your bouse."

"It's a difficult problem for everyone," Sen. Stevens said of the B-1. The subcommittee chairman told Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, sitting at the witness table, that he doubted whether there would be enough money to build both the B-1, the Stealth and keep the B-52 fleet flying.

CIA Assessment

Sen. Stevens questioned whether it would be worth spending so much money for the B-1, slated to start going into service in 1986, rather than wait a few years longer for Stealth. He said the CIA assessment given to the subcommittee Wednesday morning hardened his opinion that it might make more sense to put the B-1 money into Stealth.

The CIA assessed how B-52 and B-1 bombers laden with Cruise missiles would do against Soviet defenses for the rest of this decade "There would be practically no dif-ference," Sen. Stevens said of the penetration capabilities. Although the chairman would Psychological incapacity of one or both partners has been the reason cited for marriage breakdown in 90 percent of annulment cases processed by American church courts. But because it is not currently cited in the code of canon law, it is not required to be recog-nized as grounds for annulment, and conservative tribunals gener-

The action also would bring the law into closer conformity with actual practice. Acceptance of the psychological grounds into the code for the universal church would be "an affirmation of what we've always said here in the Unit-ed States," said the Rev. Daniel F. Hoye, associate general secretary of the National Conference of Catbolie Bishops, and would be "consistent with the jurisprudence practices in the highest courts of the church."

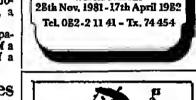

Papal Action

The move on Wednesday by the 74-member commission, which had been meeting for the previous eight days at the Vatican, is the next-to-the-last step in the church's 15-year process of revising its canon law code. It remains only for Pope John Paul II to accept and publish the code, which Fa-

U.S. Envoys Oppose Plan for Radio to Cuba

WASHINGTON - The U.S. diplomatic mission in Havana has objected to a Reagan administration plan to set up a radio service modeled on Radio Free Europe to beam broadcasts to Cuba."

Despite its objection and ques-tions raised in Congress, State De-partment officials said, the admin-istration is going ahead with the selection of a site in Florida for the 1 Hork new station. The station, to be called Radio Marti after the Cuban patriot Jose Marti, is being developed by a private nonprofil cor-poration set up in late September by the administration to get the project started.

The AWACS vote in the Senate puts an end to a bruising chapter in the evolution of the Reagan presidency. Mr. Reagan needed to win, if only to avoid the blow to his and the country's foreign policy credibility that a defeat would unquestionably have brought. But there was never an honest way to ignore the fact that Mr. Reagan had put his partisan supporters, and the supporters of presidential credibility, in an unhappy bind. This was so because, on the merits, the AWACS case, while defensible, was never so clear-cut and urgent as Mr. Reagan was forced to insist in order to justify the extraordinary investment he made in it. The prerogatives of presidential initiative in foreign policy and those of congressional review have not been in such painful collision since the Vietnam War.

Mr. Reagan himself provided, on the eve of the vote, a telling example of the lengths to which his pursuit of AWACS was taking him. Senate rejection of the package, he said, "would be a step toward closing [the Saudis] out of any peace initiative." This was an odd thing to say about a country that bas done as much as any other to thwart the one Middle East peace initiative, the United States', that has actually worked - even if, to be sure, it has not worked completely. Nor was there any hint by Mr. Reagan that the Saudis, in return for the tremendous effort to which be has gone for them, will now convert their own effort at a "peace plan" into something worthy of the name.

The central defect of the AWACS sale has been, throughout, the administration's failure to link the transfer of arms to any coherent diplomatic plan designed to ease the conflict - the Israeli-Palestinian conflict

- that figured most in Sandi Arabia's desire to build up its military strength in the first place. The difficulty of coaxing the Israelis along the route to compromise, if the Palestinians can somehow also be brought along, can only have been aggravated by the deal not least because in keeping one American promise to Saudi Arabia, Mr. Reagan broke another one to Israel. The president was able to shield this failing behind a cloak of strategic necessity so long as the AWACS debate went on He can do so no longer. At home, Mr. Reagan has cause to restrain some of the cheers that otherwise might attend a major victory. It is not simply that the struggle put a light on shortcomings in his management of foreign policy - short on ings he was able to overcome only by pay-outs of uncertain but evidently substantial dimensions to senators. There is also the potential of harm that, may, have, been, done to the social fabric of the country by feelings raised against Jews during the controversy. A country composed of different ethnie and religious groups has to be exceedingly careful that no one group is collectively penalized if members of it exercise, however vigorously, their democratic rights.

President Reagan can, finally, hope that he will not suffer the fate of Jimmy Carter in the case of the Panama Canal treaties. Mr. Carter, you will recall, also squeaked through. His leading adversary on the issue chose not to put it behind but, rather, used it relentlessly and to great political advantage. For Mr. Reagan now the need is to demonstrate that he has a truly national foreign policy. A score of 52-48 is not good enough. THE WASHINGTON POST.

Competition in the Air

Air travel is almost back to normal - or so it seems. Most travelers are getting where they want to go in spite of the air controllers' absence. Most airlines are in the black, making up for fewer fights by using bigger planes. There is even a price war of sorts on some routes.

But appearances deceive. Reductions in flights to major airports, required by the Federal Aviation Administration to ensure safety, are suppressing incentives to airline competition. As the Yale economist, Paul MacAvoy, put it, these reductions could "cancel the deregulatory gains in passenger services of the last five years." More sophisticated planning by the Federal Aviation Administration - or an end to the air controllers' strike - may be needed to save competition in the skies.

If the patient is so ill, why are his eyes so bright and his cheeks so rosy? Except at 22 heavily trafficked airports, air service really is elose to normal. Even in congested areas, discounts that have been common in recent months will vanish.

Even more worrisome is the indication that government efforts to coordinate flight reductions may end up helping to cartelize the industry. How? Visualize Alpha Airlines offering to drop two of its five daily fights from City X to City Y. The FAA passes on the information to Beta Airlines, which can now cut two of its flights, secure in the knowledge that it will not lose any share of the traffic. Only the public loses, inconveni-enced by fewer flights which in turn may push up fares.

The best remedy would be a settlement of the controllers' strike, an unlikely prospect. Second best is probably all we can hope for: Give airlines priority in air space that small and private planes now compete for. And where new cartiers compete with established lines, the FAA should bend over backward to accommodate them. If the scheduling problems become even more serious, it would be useful to experiment with free market remedies. The FAA might auction off scarce slots to the highest bidders. Airline deregulation is a success. It has held down fares in a time of rapid cost increases and encouraged innovation in a hidebound industry. What a shame if an administration that was elected to let the free market ... flourish became, in the case of air travel, the instrument of restraint.

AWACS: Victory and a Challenge

By Anthony Lewis

NEW YORK - President Reagan is entitled to exhilaration after his dramatic last-minute victory in the AWACS battle on Capitol Hill. It was a master-piece of presidential lobbying. But the AWACS denouement is

But the AWACS denouement is a tactical victory carrying with it an enormous substantive challenge to the Reagan administration. In the course of fighting congression-al opposition to the Saudi arms package, Reagan and his people described the deal as a step toward peace and stability in the Middle peace and stability in the Middle East. Now they have the burden of turning that vision into reality.

Nn one can believe that the sale of $8.5 billion in arms to Sandi Arabia will in itself ease the con-flicts in the Middle East. Suppose that present political trends con-tinue until the United States delivers the AWACS planes four years from now. The picture would probably look like this:

• Israel, feeling lonclier and more apprehensive than ever, has refused to take meaningful steps toward resolution of the Palestinian issue. The idea of "autonomy" in Gaza and the West Bank, ex-plored without result in interminable negotiations, was finally left to wither. Jewish settlements on the West Bank, still multiplying, make Israeli withdrawal from occupied territory a political impossi-

American leadership. The AWACS deal, rather than improving the possibilities, poses new ob-stacles to an effective U.S. role. The blundering way the Reagan administration gal inin the AWACS affair required the expenditure of great political capital. There was a rough confrontation with Israel and Prime Minister Begin, Reagan going so far as to sug-gest at a news conference that Be-gin was trying to make U.S. foreign policy. After that, to see the AWACS proposal win could only intensify Israelis' fears and their resistance to compromise in negotistion.

But there is an opportunity for Ronald Reagan in all this. He is uniquely situated to give Israelis the reassurance they need. He is not the type to be vindictive when he wins a fight. He can say, with credibility, that he remains totally

The place to begin is with the administration's argument that the AWACS deal would be good for peace because it would help bring the Saudis into the peace process. The only way to brighten the Critics scoff at that proposition, but there could be something to it — if the U.S. government works at making it true. As it happens, Saudi Arabia has an initiative on the table: the eightan initiative on the table: the eight-point peace plan that Crown Prince Fahd put forward in Aug-ust. Israel quickly rejected it, and the United States has pretty well ignored it. If the Reagan adminis-tration is serious about involving the Saudis in the peace process, it can no longer do that.

Prince Fahd's plan was vague, as France Fand's plant was vapue, as the critics said; it spoke only in-ferentially of Israel's right to live in peace. But the glass can as easily be called half full as half empty. The Saudis, usually so shy of in-volvement, actually said some-thing. The Fahd plant has been prejeed by both Fevritan and PLO praised by both Egyptian and PLO leaders; it has the potential of bridging suspicions and getting Palestinians into negotiations. 01981, The New York Times.

The Middle East Needs Comprehensive Policy

By Mohamed Sid-Ahmed

WASHINGTON - Anwar Sadai's assassination has brought home to the United States that the hopes Americans pinned on the peace process he initiated are shattered. It is even questionable whether Israel's withdrawal from the rest of the Sinai, as called for in the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty; can be taken for granted. The treaty stipulates that "full normalization" of relations be-tween the two countries should precede total withdrawal. After Reagan's AWACS Victory

Yesterday, the AWACS brought Reagan into the tent of history as one of the greatest American leaders in recorded history, who will be remembered with distinction for a long time. We acclaim Reagan, who has come out of the AWACS controversy a bero. We would acclaim him further if he redressed Arab rights and looked upon our cause with an eye of justice, after having realized that Zionist pressure is nothing but a wooden borse that can be broken when America's interests are at stake.

- From al-Jazirah (Riyadh).

The vote by the U.S. Senate constituted a victory for the voice of reason. The vote broke the assumption that Zionist propaganda had tried to instill in world opinion that Israel was the power that manages the United States' foreign policy.

On the Bread Shortage in Romania

It seems astonishing that following a bad harvest, Romania is actually reduced to bread rationing. Yet food supplies seem to be the Achilles' heel of the Soviet bloc as a whole. Why? Partly it is the deliberate choice of Soviet rulers to put guns before butter, but it is even more because Socialist planning just doesn't work on the land --- the Commissars find they can't dragoon either the seeds or the seasons.

NEW YORK -- Christian Scientists here, interviewed in regard to the wild stories of Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy's death and other rumors that she is dying and impersonated by another, declare that they do not expect Mrs. Eddy to live forever, despite the popular conception that she must show physical immortality to justify the theories as to the superiority of spirit over matter. They state that Mrs. Eddy has written that, in her opinion, the entire fulfillment of her teachings will extinguish death, but she has added that for herself she cannot say. Mrs. Eddy has not personally denied the report published by the New York World as in her illness, but she has declined to see newspaper representatives.

WASHINGTON --- Employers who discharge old employees and replace them by younger men willing to work for less money during the national crisis were characterized as "selfish and inhuman" in a report issued today by President Hoover's committee on unemployment relief. The committee issued a report stressing the need for immediate and speedy action in executing a comprehensive aid program as a means of assisting business to recover from the present econamic depression. Employers who have refused to shorten working hours in their respective industries in order to provide work for more men were condemned by the president's assistants. Additional credit facilities are also urged.

The 'peace marches" are merely the cutting edge of European sentiment, and the polls show general support for NATO membership. But when you have said all that, you have said nothing -- or nothing, at least, that bears on the most urgent threat to the defense of the Western alliance. The war of words now raging on the battleground of European public opinion centers quite specifically on the proposed deployment of the-ater nuclear forces on European soil. And that war is being lost. That was the unmistakable message from a gathering in Brussels the other day of former and current movers and shakers of NATO affairs. and firing managers — were quietly dropped, and workers' congresses, which were to have had these broad powers at each plant, became little more than advisory bodies.

Continuing Unrest

Chinese trade union officials found in a survey that only 25 percent of the workers' congresses bad done well even in this limited role, that 60 percent had no significant impact in voicing worker opinions and complaints, and that 15 percent of the congresses existed only on paper.

Only 30 percent of China's 400,000 industrial enterprises, generally the largest, bad actual-ly established workers' congresses, leaving nearly two-thirds of our workers disenfranchised," another union report said.

The trade unions, now under party instructions to represent the workers more effectively. complain that they are frequently frustrated by government officials who side with enterprise managers. "The production-at-any-cost mentality still blinds many leading cadres to the real dangers in worker resentment," a union leader told a Peking conference on the problem.

The result is a continuing level of unrest just beneath the surface in many Chinese industries concerning complaints, including inflation-eroded pay, changes in the bonus system, unsafe working conditions and a lack of housing and other facilities that enterprises here usually provide.

Party Intervenes

Chinese officials appear to have dealt suc-cessfully with most of the past year's protests through conciliation. These involved coal miners, tool-and-dic makers and chemical-industry workers who have demanded unions independent of the party and government. Young steelworkers in Taiyuan, west of Peking, have dem-onstrated for better living conditions. Other actions involved a two-day strike at the large Anshan steel works in northeast China over a variety of grievances, another two-day strike at a Shanghai glass works, and a half dozen reported protests over layoffs when old plants were shut. The latest reported strike was by workers of an electrical transformer plant in the southwestern Chinese city of Kunming to protest the plant management's allocation of new apartments to the director, party secretary, trade union leader and their friends, instead of the workers for whom they were built.

The provincial newspaper Yunnan Daily said the three-day strike and sit-in at the apartments and plant offices ended when city party officials intervened, eventually ordering that the quarters be turned over to the workers' congress to allocate and that the officials make public apologies for abusing their positions.

TEL AVIV - A five-year computer study of the Bible strongly indicates that one anthor - and not three as widely held in modern criticism - wrote the Book of Genesis.

"The probability of Genesis having been written by one anthor is enormously high - 82 percent, statistically," a member of the research team said in an article published in Wednesday's Jerusalem Post

Prof. Yehuda Radday, a Bible scholar from the Technion, a Haifa university, said more than 20,000 words of Genesis were fed into a computer, which conducted an analysis of its linguistic makeup.

Bible critics widely hold that Genesis had three authors - the Jawhist, or "J," author, the Elohist, or "E," author, and a priestly writer, dabbed "P."

"We found the J and E narratives to be linguistically indistinguishable," Mr. Radday said at a news conference Wednesday. But the P sections differ widely from them.

"This is only to be expected, since dramatic tales and legal documents must necessarily display different 'behavior'," he said "If you compared love letters and a telephone directory written by the same person, linguistic analysis would point to different authors." . .

New U.S. Drug Helps Combat Spinal Paralysis

U.S. Designers Come Into Their Own at New York Spring Shows

By Hebe Dorsey International Herald Tribune

NEW YORK — American fashion is like a brand new house without cobwebs — no hang-ups, no souvenirs, no memories, no family portraits and certainly no knicknacks.

That is the strongest impression that comes out of the American spring collections being shown here all of this week and next. New York designers have now come into their own and just as those of Paris, Milan and London, they are attracting their share of the international fashion press and buyers.

The days when fashion was a one-way trip to Paris are no more. Now fashion pros have to go all over the world if they want to keep up with the international fashion game. As far as American de-signers are concerned, it is a new development and sweet revenge as well — for it means a newly found independence and identity.

The tide started changing a couple of years ago when U.S. designers' clean-cut, uncluttered look began attracting both European press and buyers. Joan Burstein, who owns Brown's of London, was probably the most tuned in to American lifestyle fashions. Mrs. Burstein, who has captured both Calvin Klein and Ralph Lauren, was the first to see the importance of American designers, when the rest of European retailers were still limited to icans.

Change of Attitudes

The growing success of American designers stems from a number of factors.

"New York fashion is now attracting Euro-peans, first of all because Europeans have become accustomed to a more casual elegance, which im-plies sportswear, an American invention and forte," said Robert Sakowitz, president-owner of the Sakowitz department stores in Houston Sa-kowitz also feels that the U.S. designers' attitudes have changed. "It used to be that Seventh Avenue did not give European buyers the time of day. Americans used to look only at the American market. Today, with business slow, they are looking beyond our shores for new markets."

Bernard Ozer, vice president of Associated Mer-chandising Corp., believes American designers have been attracting Europeans steadily. "They don't come so much at fashion shows but they keep trickling in all the year round. Ozer also feels that Americans are gaining ground because they that Americans are gaung ground of which there are design for working women (of which there are more and more in Europe) whereas Europeans make unrealistic clothes for an elite.

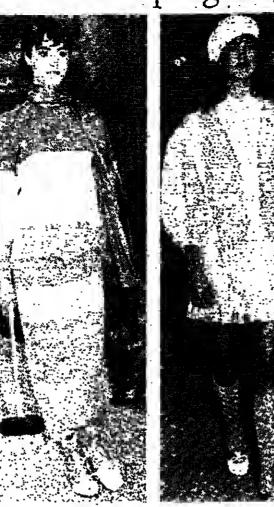

Search for Exclusivity

For Geraldine Stutz, president of the Henry Bendel specialty store, the tide has also turned but for different reasons. "In order to survive, we had to have a layer of exclusive merchandise," abe said. "In the old days, we found it very difficult to get it in the States because of all the big stores' compe tion. Jean Rosenberg [the store's merchandising director] was the first one to go to France, linky and England and to uncover budding talents such as Chloé, Sonia Rykiel and Jean Muir. But when the big department stores joined us, we no longer had that exclusivity so we had to look at our own re-

Stutz feels that there is a whole new breed of young U.S. talents. "They are very sure of them-selves," she said, "and very intent on projecting their own character and point of view. They copy no one. And they are more mitent in doing their thing their way than in acquiring instant money and status."

That was quite evident at the much applanded collection of Perry Ellis that was shown here on Tuesday. Fresh and clean, as American as a ba-nana split and just about the same color, Ellis' croquet look was totally devoid of tricks and gim-micks — and a far cry from European collections, some of which still require the help of a chambermaid and a huttonhook.

Ellis, the fair-haired boy of U.S. fashion, showed both long and short styles with the authority and aplomb that comes from success at the box office. Most U.S. store presidents were there, obviously delighted at finding right at home the kind of mer-chandise and fashion statement they did not find in Paris this time.

The long and short of Perry Ellis.

tional Herold Tribune TRIESTE - Giuseppe Verdi has always had a spe-cial significance for Trieste. After the composer's death, the city - still Austrian - was the first to raise 2 monument to him. The handsome Teatro Grande at one point changed its name to Teatro Verdi and the repertory has always been, and remains, strongly Verchan.

Needless to say, "Nabucco," that irredentist opers, has been a particular favorite here since its local de-but in January, 1843, not long after its premiere at La-Scala. The opera has been revived frequently since, notably in the tense season of 1947-48, when Trieste's future was a matter of debate and virulent conflict.

Nurmela Sings Title Role

And it was "Nabucco," in a new production, that opened the season at the Teatro Verdi on Tuesday. Partly thanks to its Austrian past, no doubt, the city has a long and distinguished musical tradition, and its musical forces have a discipline and a seriousness not always found in other Italian cities. In fact, it was the orchestra and chorus that shone in this production, even though the conducting of the veteran Oliviero de Fabrinis was sound but not inspired. The musicians in the pit played with vigor and accuracy, and the chorus - practically speaking the protagonist of this opera - sang with an impressive range of dy-namics and expression. Needless to say. Va. pensiero," the opera's most famous number, had to be sung a second time amid cheers and flowers.

Among the cast the baritone Kari Normela, after a slightly tentative start, was outstanding in the title role. His confrontation scene with the wicked Abi-gaille was anthoritative and moving, and his dramat-ic, human solo scene at the beginning of Act 4 (which in this production became the second half of Act 3) achieved its effect splendidly. The Abigaille of Rad-mila Bakooevic was guided by good intentions and intelligent musicality, though the voice sometimes simply lacked the power to do what its possessor. and Verdi - wanted of it. On occasion the soprano forced it, with unhappy results, but Abigaille's rare tender moments were delicately conveyed and for the rest the artist cleverly exploited her commanding and attractive stage presence. Vocally the young Alfredo Zanazzo was a more than acceptable Zaccaria; he is a promising young artist, though his acting was excessively wooden even for a high priest. In the smaller, more anonymous roles of Fenena and Ismaele, Eleonora Jankovic and Gactano Scano sang clearly and warmly and were exceptionally positive in their contributions to the numerous ensembles."

Misha Scandella's painterly sets were often good looking, though they ignored the requirements of the drams (Nabucco was obliged to see things through a thick backdrop and address a door that did not exist). The costumes, largely in neo-barbarian style, were colorful but sometimes confusing. The director, Dario Dalla Corte, handled the choruses skillfully but paid less attention to the principals, who could have done with some help. The story of "Nabucco" is an best patchy and labyinthine. The staging might have clarified it a bit more.

But no matter. This was a gala occasion, the happy and enjoyable opening of a season that continues into May and promises — with a program ranging from Puccini and Wagner to Granados and Monins to be one of Italy's most interesting this year.

Rambert Stages North's 'Lonely Town'

By Nocl Goodwin

Revald Tribune L ONDON — Having just pub-lished, in "Ballet Rambert: 50 Years and On," a checklist of 288 dance productions, together with various essays and interviews, the oldest regular dance company in Britain has now added two works to the total. Seen on tour at Ox-ford (where the New Theatre is now renamed the Apollo), they are by the company's new resident team of Robert North and Richard Alston, the former staging his first dance work since becoming artistic director six months ago.

North is from Charleston, S.C. and he gives a transatlantic turn of phrase to "Lonely Town, Lonely Street" as the dancers, in jump suits and jeans, move with a sense of underlying menace, of aggres-sion nervously checked, amid the overflowing trash cans and sus-Storer's design. beaten up by a girls' gang; of a tough altercation in danced jealonsy (Lucy Birge and North himself); of a potentially romantic duct (Quinny Sacks and Nelson Fernandez) that turns sour. The dancers all appear together in the finale, but each remains isolated and alone, though the work as a whole is less a social comment than a diversion in its own particular mood. So also is "Night Music," for which Alston has turned not to the Mozart music the title might sug-gest, but to his six wholly charm-ing notturni for trios of voices and basset horns, interspersed with movements for the instruments alone, the party-music of its time. Against a splotchy decor of magenta and green, with silver side panels, often confusing the line of the dancers, Alston's figures ex-press a gentle friendship of associ-ation in which occasional suggestions of emotions never remain clouded for long. Whether by accident or design, the new works have given the Rambert repertory the kind of triple bill that every artistic director dreams of in terms of balanced. contrast and popular appeal. They are followed by Christopher Bruce's "Ghost Dances," which had its premiere last July. Welcome then, it grows stronger on further viewing, as well as becom-ing a wide success in its specified theme of compassion for South American victims of oppression, the dancers in tragic mood depict-ing the loss of innocence, of lives and of life itself.

Events in the ongoing Dance Umbrella festival in London and other centers, have included 'a French contribution from Caroline Marcadé and Dominique Petit, who run the Paris Studio des Quatre Temps. Their program reflected a background in classical ballet as well as modern dance, and in dramatic theater as well as movements, with often compelling solor for each dancer and a cinematiclike work, "Pierre Robert," involving both.

Brighton's Gardner Arts Center housed the Umbrella appearance by Extemporary Dance Company. now in its sixth year as the newest regular touring group on the Brit-ish scene, and in its first performances under a new director, Emilyn Claid, sometime member of the Canadian National Ballet and the Martha Graham company. Her refurbishment of the repertory with new works by herself and others includes a diverting "numbers" dance by the New York experi-mentalist David Gordon, and more urban angst in "City" by the Texas-born Tom Jobe, who is back for a year with London Contempo-rary Dance Theatre.

My close friends who have followed my career in the company know that it's a very well-structured and efficient company which makes many contributions to Italy in terms of investments and jobs.

New friends, on the other hand, don't know the company so well. For them it's mysterious and they tend to be skeptical. Just to be big and profitable inspires skepticism

Today, I'm responsible for two important building projects: a large new plant at Santa Palomba, which will export IBM products all over the world, and a new distribution center in Milan, which will manage deliveries to our Italian customers.

Just the other day I was showing some people around and they asked me whether investments like this benefit Italy or the Americans. Naturally, IBM worldwide

NYSE Prices Fall Sharply; Bank Lowers Prime Rate

From Agency Dispatches

NEW YORK - Prices on the New York Stock Exchange, after pondering some grim economic news and a brighter interest-rate picture, fell Thursday in sluggish trading. The market had rebounded a bit

NG FUND D-BANK NCEPT U.S. Steps Up Attack On Foreign Subsidies

On Subsidies to Chicken Exporters

By Clyde H. Farnsworth New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - The U.S. government, stepping up its cam-paign against exports that are subsidized by its trading partners, has announced an action that could lead to a new skirmish over chickens with the ECC.

Acting on a complaint from domestic poultry producers, U.S. Trade Representative Bill Brock Wednesday told a House trade panel that the government had begun international proceedings challenging payments made from the Common Market's agricultural fund to European exporters who sell mainly to the Middle East.

The National Broiler Council and other domestic representatives alleged in their petition to the government that the Common Market provides more than $100 million a year in subsidies, enabling the En-ropeans to get 80 percent of a Mid-die Eastern market in whole chickens valued at $324 million last

With their new petrodollar wealth, the Middle Eastern coun-tries have become the fastest grow-ESEARCH ing market for chickens in the world. Consumption has multi-plied by more than 60 times since 1973. Canadiana Salita

The thrust of the complaint is that the export subsidies enable the Europeans to sell more cheap-ly, thereby freezing out the U.S. competition

The United States had waged what came to be known as "the chicken war" against the European Community two decades ago. Then the issue was U.S. access to the European market itself, following quotas and higher tariffs that the Europeans imposed to protect their domestic producers. The U.S. government retaliated with actions Chamber 1444 hitting mainly shipments of French brandy and German cars.

The new contest grows ont of long-standing efforts by the Unit-ed States to get its trading partners to reduce a vast range of trade-inhibiting measures.

Chickens have attracted the most attention because of the volume of trade involved. But the United States has also started proccedings against the Europeans to get them to eliminate subsidies of wheat flour and sugar exports, and is considering taking up a case brought by domestic pasta producers, mainly against producers from Italy.

The issue involves much more than the food industry, however, and affects trading relations with others besides the Europeans. David M. Roderick, chairman of the sociated Press reported. also lowered the real value U.S. Steel, has said his company is [But he said legislation to give many of their mortgages, writte preparing to file petitions against S&Ls many of the powers of com-

It also involves the credits that governments provide to foreign customers at below the going rate of interest.

In his testimony Wednesday before the House Ways and Means trade subcommittee, Mr. Block said the cost of interest rate subsidies paid by the industrial countries last year was $5.5 billion.

France alone provided $2.3 biltion of such subsidized credits; Britain, $1 billion, Japan $566 mil-lion and the United States $315 million.

Twenty-one industrial countries have just concluded an agreement to increase minimum interest rate levels by up to 2.5 percentage points in a move that should reduce the credit subsidies by 20 to Dercent.

Economist Adds Up Thrifts' Woes

ington Post Service HARWICHPORT. Mass. tions Two out of every three U.S. savings institutions are insolvent when their assets and habilities are calculated at realistic, current market levels, according to the chief economist for the Boston Federal Reserve Bank.

As a result, Richard W. Kopcke told a conference Wednesday on the future of the thrift industry, the federal government faces a possible "bailout" cost of at least $30 billion. In the event of actual liquidation of failing thrift institutions, rather than a mere subsidy from Washington, Mr. Kopcke predicted the cost to the taxpayers could exceed $200 billion. His assessment came as Congress took a major step toward aiding the savings and loan industry. The House voted 371 to 46 to approve legislation allowing emergency takeovers of ailing thrift institutions. The legislation would permit banks and S&Ls in one state to take over ailing institutions in another state. The Senate favors a broader bill.

[In testimony Thursday before the Senate Banking Committee, Federal Reserve Board Chariman Paul Volcker urged the Senate to support House legislation, The As-

The legislation would let S&Ls operate mutual funds, underwrite unicipal revenue bonds, offer checking accounts to businesses and expand their real estate invest-

[Mr. Volcker said the measure would give more power to S&Ls in certain areas and therefore would "seem to provide a strong inducement [to banks] to convert to thrift charters" to take advantage of the added authority. Instead, he said, S&Ls should been given "limited commercial loan powers" to meet the needs of local, smaller busi-

[Mr. Volcker also opposed al-lowing banks move quickly into operating mutual funds, saying this power would attract more funds from traditional deposits and add further pressure to the earnings problems of thrift institutions, Renters reported.]

Mr. Kopcke's predictions were based on a study of mutual savings banks in Massachusetts and S&L associations in California, as well as a general examination across the country.

He pointed out that sharply rising interest rates have not only raised dramatically the cost of money obtained by the thrifts but also lowered the real value of many of their mortgages, written

The plight of the S&Ls and other thrifts, he said, will not be relieved by the recent institution of the All Savers Certificates, which will establish an additional drain on the U.S. Treasury. An institution with a declining net worth based on actual market conditions is confronted with the need to raise new capital, he said. If the ratio of its capital to assets should fall seriously, Mr. Kopcke said, "the bank's [or S&L's] continuing ability to serve the public safely may be questioned."

Using a measurement of assets and liabilities based on current market conditions rather than book values -- which "no longer accurately describe the financial condition of thrift institutions" -Mr. Koncke said that the average net worth of all thrift institutions in the United States works ont to minus 7 percent, with 60 percent having a negative net worth,

The prospective losses for fully two-thirds of all thrift institutions will exhaust their reported oct worth" unless interest rates fall sharply, he said. As for the thrifts that remain solvent, "the reported oet worth-to-asset ratio of most will drop very close to zero during the 1980s."

Mr. Kopcke said to raise the in-dustry's net worth from the cur-rent minus 7 percent to a plus 6 percent, the industry would need a "bailout" of $80 to $120 billion to cover current and prospective loss-ĈS.

Short of slam. West led the spade jack, solving South's minor problem. His major problem of course, was in the trump suit, and the lack of intermediate cards was a crucial factor. MILAN — La Scala, Italy's most prestigious opera bouse, has an-nounced a 25-percent increase in ock-et prices for the 1981-82 season, which opens Dec. 7 with a new production of Wagner's "Lohengrin."

The most expensive orchestra scats will sell for 75,000 lire (about $60) while a box seat will cost 62,000 lire. A first gallery seat will be 16,000 lire. Carlo Maria Badini, the theater's superintendeot, cited infla6on-swelled order as insulfit the inserts 1 a Scala

Comeback Story Is Complete as Yankees Fall, 9-2

By Thomas Boswell

Literation of the second

Washington Post Service NEW YORK - The Los Angeles Dodgers put out the lights of the New York Yankees on Wednesday night, winning the sixth and last game of the 1981 World Series, 9-2.

In the top of the fourth inning, a third of the vapor lights over Yankee Stadium went dead for nine of Dodger glory, an occasion to minutes. In the bottom of the laud one of the greatest comeback fourth, it appeared that perhaps as teams in the history of baseball.

much as a third of the lights in Yankee Manager Boh Lemon's baseball hrain had gone dark. The Sudden-death, win-or-go-home games to reach a World Series. five sudden-death, win-or-go-home games to reach a World Series.

The Dodgers, in sweeping the last four games of this 78th World And the Dodgers are only the second team in history to lose the first Series to win their first world two games of a Series, then come championship since 1965, found back to win the oext four. The their way greased with Yankee Dodgers were the victims on the other occasion, in 1978, when the blunders.

Perhaps this would, in a model Yankees managed the feat. world, have been entirely a night As the Dodgers' manager, Tom-my Lasorda, crowed, "This is the greatest, guttiest bunch of players I've ever seen."

Certainly Pedro Guerrero and Ron Cey - who shared most-valuable-player honors for the Series with the Game 5 hero, Steve Yeager - fit that mold on a raw night.

Guerrero, after beginning his first post-season with a horrific 6for-46, went 6-for-11 in the last three games, and he batted in five of the Dodger runs in a marvelous performance Wednesday evening. This goat-turned-splendid-hero hit a 420-foot, two-run triple in the fifth to cap a decisive three-run rally that gave the Dodgers a 4-1 lead

Then, his two-run, bases-loaded single in the next inning finished a four-im rally that built the lead to a crushing §-1.

Finally, Guerrero, a .300 hitter this season, slapped a homer a foot over the left-field wall in the eighth 10 finish the scoring.

Dizzy but Determined

Perhaps more emblematic of the Dodgers was the woozy Penguin, Cey, who looked like a man play-ing the game on thin ice. He became dizzy and left in the sixth inning, but he had left his mark.

Beaned by a Goose Gossage pitch Sunday. Cey singled on the first pitch be saw Wednesday night, giving his mates inspiration. And with the score 1-1 in the top of the fifth, he hit a spooky, bad-hop single up the middle that drove in what turned out to be the same-winning run.

Finally, the Dodgers got the fourth post-season victory of 1981 from Burt Hooton, who went a shaky 5½ innings in which he allowed 10 base runners before giving way to left-hander Steve Howe, who got the save. However, if this entire Dodger championship — built over the last three tense weeks on what Steve Garvey, the Series' leading hitter (A17) called "blood, sweat and toil" — is thought of as a work of veteran fortitude, then this final which he should never have been thrust, he lost a third Series game within six disastrous days.

This contest was a I-I pitchers' duel when, with two out and two on in the Yankee fourth, Lemon sent up Bobby Murcer to pinch hit for starter Tommy John. It was a staggeringly unconventional move.

On Saturday, Lemon, whose faux pas in the last fortnight would fill a managerial yellow sheet, had made the opposite mistake: allowing Frazier to hit in the fifth inning with two on and two out. Frazier struck out, then never got another batter out. That was a strategic mistake, because Frazier is, to he blunt just the sort of fellow for whom pinch hitters were created.

Wrong Equation

On Wednesday evening, with the game still in the balance, Lemoe tried to make a right out of two wrongs, sending a pinch hitter up for John, just the sort of fellow for whom a pinch hitter shouldn't be

"I bope you got somebody out there [in the bullpen] who can hold em." John told Lemon with undisguised bitterness. Lemon didn't. Again, his middle relief men were a cast of arsonists. Frazier allowed seven runs in this Series while get-ting only 10 batters out, and Ron Davis, who was blasted for three of the Dodgers' four runs in the sixth, allowed eight Series runs while getting just seven outs.

"We wanted to bit off Frazier, rather than John," admitted Lasorda. "John is always lough on us." "John going out and Frazier coming in was the key for us," said

Garvey. Again this time, Frazier had his usual assoriment of bad hops, hloops and poor fielding. Davey Lopes, who was later to make a record sixth error for a Series second baseman, hit a seeing-eye grounder and was sacrificed to second. Then, with two out, this onesided game bad its only truly crucial play. Cey hit an easy chop up

On a night of Yankee foundering, there were goat horns aplenty to keep those of Lemon and Frazier company. Dave Winfield end-ed the Series I-for-22 and the postseason I-for-28, and the crowd booed him cruelly. The New York cold, which had bothered Pedro Guerrero, disappeared Wednesday night. And Steve Yeager's season on the Los Angeles Dodger bench, a year of bitterness, was sweet at the finish.

Italian Racer Cleared in Monza Death

Resters

MILAN - A three-year nightmare for Italian racing driver Riccardo Patrese ended Wednesday night when a court cleared him of manslaughter in the death of Ronnie Peterson, a Swedish driver, during the 1978 Italian Grand Prix.

The court decided, after a one-day trial that was unprecedented in motor racing, that Peterson was killed not by Patrese but by the inherent risks of Grand Prix driving. It was feared in motor racing circles that a conviction could lead to other such cases against drivers, team managers and track organizers.

The court had heard written evidence from James Hunt of Britain, a former world champion driver, who blamed Patrese for the Monza pileup in which Peterson died. Hunt accused the Italian of making a reckless maneuver to the left as the Grand Prix field braked for a chicane.

The prosecution alleged that reckless driving by Patrese forced Hunt to swerve into Peterson's car, causing a 10-car collision.

Also acquitted was Gianni Restelli, former director of the Monza circuit, who was charged with manslaughter on accusations of having started the race improperly.

"It just seems highly unlikely that you'd take out your best pitcher - at least I assume that your starting pitcher of that night is your best pitcher - that early in a ne game.

"I mean, I was throwing well. 1 wasn't getting cuffed around. I'd just completed 13 innings against a club of that caliber and held it to one run-1 wanted to keep pitching and thought I would. "But what I think doesn't really matter. We hadn't been scoring

Observer Time-Warped Power

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK -It is 2 a.m., but IN you can forget about the hot ehocolate and bedtime for me, folks, because Kirk Douglas and the aircraft carrier Nimitz have just slipped through a time warp. and when people slip through time warps it takes wild horses to drag me away from the television set.

One moment, Kirk was steering the Nimitz through 1981 Pacific waters; the next, he was cruising off Pearl Harbor in De-10

cember, 1941. and guess what imperial fleet shows up on the Baker radar preparing for a sneak attack on what famous Hawaiian naval base. Right you

Suddenly Kirk is in a position to undo 40 years of absolutely mon-strous history because the Nimitz, of course, has all these jet air-planes and atomic weapons which the attacking Japanese have never heard of.

I do not give the plot away by revealing that nothing of the sort is done since time-warp fans know from experience that nothing useful is ever done by people who slip through time warps. Instead of seizing their great opportunity they always fritter it away by staring bug-eyed at one another and saying, "I can't believe this is happening," and, "What a crazy situation.

We time-warp freaks don't expect anything valuable to be done, to tell the truth. The pleasure of time-warp plots is their power to gratify our desire to cheat. When you slip back through a time warp, you are like a person playing poker with a stacked deck.

* * *

The sport is in watching the oldtimers' jaws drop in amazement while people who are 40 years anead of them toy with them and give them the know-it-all treatment. It is a joke about power, about the power that comes from knowing far more than people who think they are powerful.

This situation produces highly satisfying feelings of superiority, New York Times Service which is why I am so fond of timewarp stories.

In one of my favorites, I slip through a time warp immediately after the Republican Party has buried Theodore Roosevelt in the vice presidency and find him moaning that his career is ended. "Chin up, Teddy," I tell him. "You will be president before the year is out." Teddy's jaw drops in astonishment. "How do you know that?" I do not explain. I am too occupied feeling superior to this ignorant fellow.

"After serving a second term." I tell him, "you will pass the presidency to Taft and then try to win it back in 1912, but you will never beat Woodrow Wilson."

You will note that in this plot, though I have the power to save President McKinley from assassi-nation by telling him the name of the man who wants to shoot him, I do not do so. Inhumane? A reluc-tance to tamper with history? Not at all. I do not fool around in time warps in order to do good or to reshape an unsatisfying universe. I am there strictly for the pleasure of feeling superior to Theodore Roo-sevelt, to get back at Teddy, who

--- in unwarped time --- has always seemed so vastly superior to me. * * *

Contentedly, I went off to bed, and passing through the parlor, noticed two oddly dressed persons of indeterminate sex staring bugeyed at each other.

"I can't believe this is happening," said one.

"What a crazy situation," said the other.

I instantly recognized the symp-toms. "You have slipped through a time warp, I presume," said I. "Whatever you do, don't tell me what's going to happen over the next 10 years." "Are you O.K. Dad?"

But of course. It was my daughter in the latest boutique ward-robe. She introduced the other oddly dressed person, a male. They had just decided on matrimony, she said. "But nobody gets married nowadays," I said. "Dad," she said, "you are living in the past." I went to the kitchen to recover with hot chocolate. Fortunately, Theodore Roosevelt was there.

Twenty films in 22 years. Some of them — "The 400 Blows," "Small Change," "The Last Metro" — are open and explora-tory. "It was this fifth character that I needed. When you are living a great drama you do it with unreheved seriousness. Then 20 years later, you see the comical, the ridiculous aspects. This is what Mme. Jouve represents." Truffaut went on to talk about his interest in the extremities of romantic agony. They are — he says these things in a quiet and innocent manner — his cowboy pictures

"The American cinema, tradi-tionally, has this notion of a goal to be achieved. And it is achieved, after great dangers and difficulties. All over the world spectators have found great pleasure in these things. "But this kind of theme is not possible in Europe. We have a skepticism about goals being at-tained. We think goals are illuso-ry. We don't conceive of the individual embarked on a great enterprise.

Sentia ts Instead of Steers

"We don't make pictures about taking 5,000 steers across the country. So what do I dn? I take sentiments to the end in-stead of enterprises." In other words, Jeanne Morean tipping herself, Jules and Jim and an old motorcar over a precipice equals John Wayne and his stagecoach. "Well, you know, 'Adele H.' had a happy ending. The protagonist passes her, at the end, on the street, and she no longer recog-nizes him. She is released from her obsession. And in Woman Next Door' it is kind of a happy ending. They are freed by love from the pain it kept them in." In Truffaut's concept of love, men may be the superficial initiators, hut the engine is the woman. "Men know nothing about love," he said. "they are always the stronger. "I think men live a love story but without being able to remark it. They have no time. They live it without controlling it intellectually. Women, on the other hand, both live love and are able to remark it. A woman is constantly saving: now 1 am happy, now 1 am happier, now I am not as happy. "And acting upon this. It is women who act. Women are the professionals at love; men are the amateurs."

Truffaut's violent ending in "The Woman Next Door" prompted a question about his way of dealing with death. It was, he said, something he bad come to relatively late. "For a long time," he said, "when I wanted to introduce death I did it in films that were adapted from books: 'Jules and Jim' or 'Shoot the Piano Player.' I never had any trouble filming death. What I iacked was the course to invent it."

It wasn't until "Stolen Kisses" that he finally forced himself to write a death, and even then it was somewhat by indirection and menually holding Alfred Hitch-cock's hand. "A man in an office is talking on the phone," he re-called, "and suddenly he col-lapses, and somebody else in the office goes to the phone and says,

'Hang up, your party has just died.'" Constant Theme The motor of Truffaut's films, whether obssessional or exploratory, remains the relation of men and women. Love makes the cameras go 'round. "For me, it is more important than social questions, he said. "It is the way to lead people to truth. There is more truth in sentimental relations than in social relations. There is more truth in the bedroom than in the office or the board room."

Emotions count. "Take children, a little boy or girl. They are more true when they are crying

For Truffaut, a great many adult activities — politics, mon-cy-making, power — are games that adults play to imitate adults.
